Messages emerge. New lewd online conversations and texts purported to be from mayoral candidate Anthony Weiner to another woman came out yesterday. Staying power. Weiner and his wife, Huma, addressed the topic at a press conference. Some truth. He admitted he sexted after he resigned from Congress but will stay in the mayoral race. PAGE 02

Weiner: You are a walking fantasy.

Woman: I don't want to just be a fantasy. I want to take care of your every need.

Weiner: Me too. Staring at pics of u. Pathetic?

Woman: Not pathetic at all. So flattering. I think about you all the time. I can't help myself.

Weiner: So you wont tell me what picture of me you like the most or turned you on the most? Only tv?

Woman: Specifically your health care rants were a huge turn on

Weiner's 'Danger' zone

Weiner: What are you wearing? Much for me to take off? I'd hold u by your throat.

Woman: I'm wearing a skirt and no panties. Easy access for you Weiner: I like to whisper in your ear while I make love to you. That ok?

Woman: More than okay. Just the idea of it turns me on so much. I want to connect with you on every level

Weiner: Taking a shower. Wanna join me?

Woman: That sounds perfect

Weiner: I was reading your tweets and looking at your pics. So I thought id hold your wrists to settle you down.

Woman: ...you have no idea how turned on I am right now. I really want you to manhandle me

Weiner still sexted after he resigned

Hard facts. The candidate and his wife addressed the allegations at a press conference.

Alongside his wife, mayoral hopeful Anthony Weiner admitted Tuesday he engaged in lewd conversations with strangers online even after his resignation from Congress in 2011.

"Some of them happened after my resignation," Weiner said in response to report that he had engaged in such conversations as recently as last fall.

Weiner's wife, Huma Abedin, also spoke, saying his resignation was just the beginning of a time in their marriage "that was very difficult."

"Our marriage, like many others, has had its ups and its downs," Abedin said.

The couple spoke after nightlife website The Dirty posted screenshots of several lewd conversations allegedly between Weiner and an anonymous woman who claims to have continued their relationship until at least November 2012.

In his statement, Weiner said, "Some things that have been posted today

In one of the conversations revealed, the user believed to be Weiner asked the anonymous woman, "Can you hard delete all our chats here?"

- In the conversations, Weiner allegedly used the alias "Carlos Danger."

are true and some are not, there is no question that what I did was wrong."

Weiner said that, before announcing his bid for mayor, he told Abedin about his conversations.

John Catsimatidis, Republican candidate and head of Gristedes Foods, called for Weiner to drop out "so we can end this soap opera."

Public Advocate Bill de Blasio said mayoral candidates should address issues New Yorkers care about, such as education, jobs and affordable housing.

Watchdog. Mayor Bloomberg vetoes police oversight bills

Paving the way for an override fight, Mayor Michael Bloomberg yesterday vetoed City Council legislation that would create an outside watchdog for the police department and expand categories protected against racial profiling by the NYPD.

In the expected vetoes of the Community Safety

Act's measures, Bloomberg called the two bills "dangerous and irresponsible," adding they would "make New Yorkers less safe."

Despite Bloomberg and NYPD Commissioner Ray Kelly's efforts, Council is expected to override the mayoral veto later this summer. ANNA SANDERS

Police are investigating the death of a 4-month-old baby boy that was found in a Queens day care center Monday afternoon.

The baby was found dead in a bassinet around 3:30 p.m. at the Q-Kids Day Care Center in Cambria Heights, police said.

The medical examiner will determine the cause of the death, but a police spokesman said there weren't any signs of trauma.

Cops said that the investigation is ongoing. LAURA SHIN

Firefighters injured in 5-alarm fire

A five-alarm fire tore through a Hamilton Heights apartment building Monday evening, leaving at least one civilian and 19 firefighters injured, the FDNY said.

The fire erupted at 520 W. 139th St. about 3:45 p.m. and ripped through the top floor and cockloft of the seven-story building, according to the FDNY.

Officials confirmed on Tuesday morning that an overloaded electrical outlet was the cause of the fire, The New York Post reports.

The injured firefighters were all treated for smoke inhalation, and the civilian was treated at the scene for minor injuries, according to the Post.

Approximately 200 firefighters had reported to the scene to help battle the blaze, according to the FDNY.

Red Cross workers were helping displaced residents find shelter on Monday night.

Brooklyn man charged with breaking into churches

A 34-year-old Brooklyn man has been charged with breaking into four churches in Queens and attempting to break into a fifth during a one-week period earlier this month, District Attorney Richard Brown said.

"The defendant is accused of being a one-man crime wave and brazenly breaking into churches throughout Queens and helping himself to whatever he could find of value," Brown said.

David Spencer allegedly broke into four churches from July 10-17, stealing $7,000 worth of items. He's also accused of trying to break into a fifth church.

SWISS DECLARE WAR ON US

Watchmakers are FURIOUS and luxury brands are LIVID, but WHO CARES? We made this $99 Swiss watch for YOU!

How dare Stauer break the unwritten rule in Switzerland? Chaos erupted at this year's Basel watch fair. The watchmaking elite attacked me in French, German and Italian (with the occasional British accent), outraged that Stauer would engineer a luxury Swiss-made timepiece for under $100. They said it couldn't be done, but we did it anyway. Now you get to wear the spectacular Swiss-Made Stauer Bienne for ONLY $99!

Join the luxury revolution. The crown princes of watchmaking worried that their exorbitant yacht vacations in Monaco would be in jeopardy. For years they convinced the world that Swiss luxury should cost THOUSANDS. But in reality, those thousands went to Swiss bank accounts, six-figure supermodels and ski chalets and NOT into the engineering of the watches. Shame on them. It's time for a change. You deserve it.

You CAN own an exquisitely engineered Swiss timepiece for under $100. The only thing that matters is the machine, so we went to the factory in Bienne and met with Francois, a fourth generation watchbuilder who makes masterpieces that sell for $5,000 and more. Working together we smashed the once unbreakable $100 barrier. The shockwaves have turned the luxury watch world upside-down. That's why the Swiss declared war on us. We consider it a compliment.

The industry cursed me but the buyers were thrilled. It was like the walls came down and watch lovers were set free. The cabal was broken. Now everyone can experience the cachet of a genuine Swiss timepiece. Next I'll begin work on the 20-room mansion for $30,000 and an Italian sports car for $3,300. How about a private jet for $12,000? If we can break the Swiss price by this much, who knows what's next?

Your satisfaction is 100% guaranteed. Wear the Stauer Bienne for 30 days. If you don't fall in love with it, send it back for a full refund of your purchase price. But I'm convinced that once you put it on, this watch will stay on your wrist... at least until we unveil our next masterpiece.

Quinn proposes new express ferry service

City Council Speaker and mayoral candidate Christine Quinn announced plans on Tuesday to create an express ferry service from Staten Island to Midtown if elected.

The 20-minute express ferry, which would run from the St. George Terminal and Manhattan's Pier 79 on the West Side, would reduce commutes by a half hour, Quinn's campaign said.

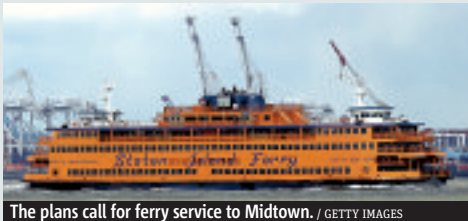

"By making smart investments in infrastructure and service like this express ferry, we can cut travel times in half—or more," Quinn said.

The proposal is part of Quinn's plans to end commutes longer than an hour. The express ferry plan would also include a shuttle to the heart of Midtown and access to a Citi Bike station.

Other mayoral candidates have also supported better ferry service.

Former City Comptroller Bill Thompson has backed legislation for more frequent ferry service. Former Congressman Anthony Weiner has proposed launching ferries in all five boroughs. Public Advocate Bill de Blasio and former MTA chairman Joseph Lhota have also expressed interest in expanding ferry service in the city.

A 23-year-old woman was shot in East Harlem early Tuesday morning near a public housing project where five mayoral candidates stayed over the weekend.

The victim was shot twice just before 3:40 a.m. and transported to Harlem Hospital where she later died, police said.

The shooting occurred on Park Avenue north of E. 132nd Street, minutes from the Lincoln Houses, a public housing development where five Democratic mayoral candidates slept Saturday to highlight NYCHA conditions.

City Comptroller John Liu took a midnight tour of the neighborhood during his stay at the Lincoln houses. He said Tuesday's shooting "hits home."

DOMA. Estate tax refunds available for same-sex spouses

New York will give estate tax refunds to qualifying same-sex spouses, after the Supreme Court found the Defense of Marriage Act unconstitutional last month, Governor Andrew Cuomo said.

Same-sex spouses previously had to pay expensive estate taxes when their partner died because their marriages were not recognized.

"The Supreme Court's decision to strike down DOMA was a groundbreaking civil rights victory that brought the LGBT community closer to the true meaning of equal rights under the law," Governor Cuomo said.

New Yorker Edie Windsor, who brought the DOMA case to the Supreme Court, is happy about the state's news.

"I am, of course, thrilled that I will be getting a refund of the estate tax that I never should have had to pay," Windsor said. "What makes me even happier is the fact that no other gay person will ever again have to face the indignity of DOMA."

Those impacted by the change can call the New York State Taxpayer Information Center at 518-457-5387. BREANNA BISHOP

Kate and William show off Britain's new baby prince

Proud parents. Kate said they were both feeling "very emotional."

Prince William and his wife, Kate, gave the world its first glimpse of their new baby yesterday when they left the hospital with the boy who is third in line to the British throne.

To huge cheers from well-wishers and hospital staff, the beaming couple waved and took turns holding their son, wrapped tightly in a white blanket with only the top of his head visible.

"He's got her looks, thankfully," William told reporters, adding that he could not be happier.

Kate, wearing a pale blue dress with white polka dots, said they were Waiting on a name

The baby's name will be announced later. George and James, both traditional royal names, were favored choices with British bookmakers.

- Kate's parents, Carole and Michael Middleton, were the first visitors to see the new child. Asked if she would reveal the name or suggestions, Carole Middleton laughed and said: "Absolutely not."

Quoted

"We are still working on a name, so we will have that as soon as we can."

both feeling "very emotional."

"It's such a special time. Any parent ... will know what this feeling is like," she said before William drove the young family away in a Range Rover.

Kate, 31, gave birth to the couple's first child on Monday afternoon, ending weeks of feverish anticipation about the arrival, and all three spent the night in the hospital — St. Mary's in west London.

They adhered to tradition by giving the public the first sight of the baby on the steps of the hospital as they left — just as William's father, Prince Charles, and late mother, Princess Diana, did with him. REUTERS

New asset

Royal baby worth his weight in gold

The Firm, as Britain's royal family calls itself, has a new asset.

With the world media in a frenzy over the birth of Prince William and wife Kate's son, companies from airlines to champagne makers have jumped on the chance to cash in on the wave of popularity sweeping over the royal family. From royal potties to blue-cream-filled doughnuts to china commemorative plates, the range of merchandise celebrating the birth of the prince ranges from the obvious to the bizarre.

Verizon Wireless unveils three new Droid smartphones

Exclusive. The deal with Motorola could be a blow for phone manufacturers like HTC and Samsung.

Verizon Wireless, the biggest U.S. mobile service provider, yesterday announced three new phones under its Droid smartphone brand from Google Inc.'s Motorola.

The phones — the Droid Mini, Droid Ultra and Droid Maxx — will go on sale for $99, $199 and $299, respectively, for customers who sign a two-year contract and will be available in Verizon stores Aug. 20, according to Verizon Wireless.

The lowest price phone, the Mini, is a compact device with a 4.3-inch display screen. Motorola boasts that its mid-priced phone in the range, the Ultra, is the skinniest smartphone that can run on high-speed long-term evolution, or LTE, networks.

It claimed that its Maxx phone has the best battery life of any LTE phone on the market. It can be used for as long as 48 hours without being charged, compared with a previous version of the device that boasted 32 hours of battery life.

The exclusivity agreement with Motorola could be a blow for phone makers, including HTC Corp., which has devices that have also carried the Droid brand in the past, and Korea's Samsung Electronics.

Verizon Wireless Vice

Prices

Verizon said the full retail price would be:

- $499 for the Mini
- $599 for the Ultra
- $699 for the Maxx

President of Marketing Jeff Dietel said that since Droid phones should only include its "elite" phones based on Google's Android software, it wanted a manufacturer "that matched all the expectations" for unique hardware and services.

Dietel said that his company would still carry Android phones from vendors besides Motorola.

China. First US citizen detained in pharma corruption scandal

The first U.S. citizen has been detained in China in connection with probes sparked by an unfolding corruption scandal in the drugs industry, as China widens the range of international firms and staff under the spotlight.

Police have also questioned two further Chinese employees from drugmaker AstraZeneca in Shanghai, after a local sales representative was taken away for questioning earlier.

And China's health ministry said 39 hospital staff members would be punished for taking bribes from drug companies.

The unnamed American is the first U.S. citizen to be detained in connection with the investigations, and the second foreign national, after a British risk consultant linked with GlaxoSmith-Kline was held last week.

Meanwhile, Chinese doctors and officials at the receiving end of bribes are also feeling the wrath of the authorities.

US House OKs military aid to Egypt

Leaders of the U.S. House of Representatives panel in charge of foreign aid proposed on July 18 that military aid for Egypt be kept at $1.3 billion next year, one of few programs left unscathed in a bill seeking steep cuts in international spending. U.S. law bars aid to countries where there has been a military coup, a determination that must be made by President Barack Obama's administration, not Congress. But many U.S. officials want to preserve ties to Egypt's military and do not want to risk contributing to further upheaval.

Dinosaur tail discovered in Mexico

A team of paleontologists have discovered the fossilized remains of a 72-million-year-old dinosaur tail in a desert in northern Mexico, the country's National Institute for Anthropology and History said.

Apart from being unusually well-preserved, the 16-foot tail was the first ever found in Mexico.

The team, made up of paleontologists and students, identified the fossil as a hadrosaur, or duck-billed dinosaur. The tail, found near the small town of General Cepeda, likely made up half the dinosaur's length.

FDA considers tightening rules on menthol cigarettes

Still, at least some tobacco company analysts see the tone of the report as positive for the industry in so far as it did not recommend an outright ban.

"We believe it's unlikely that menthol will be banned," said Bonnie Herzog, an analyst at Wells Fargo Securities, in a research report. "We see this as a buying opportunity as we expect the stock to recover as investors digest this report," she said, referring to

The FDA's move comes during a trade dispute in which Indonesia charges that the United States illegally allowed menthol cigarettes to remain on the market while banning the import of clove-flavored cigarettes from Indonesia.

Sacha Baron Cohen quitting Queen biopic

After years of planning and development, Sacha Baron Cohen has reportedly scrapped plans to portray Queen frontman Freddie Mercury on the big screen, exiting the film due to creative differences with the surviving members of Queen, according to Deadline. Cohen was reportedly hoping for an edgier portrayal of the late singer for the film, which was first announced in 2010, while the band members are leaning toward a more family-friendly, PG-rated account.

Nick Cannon wants DemBabies to become 'college professors or neuroscientists'

Nick Cannon has become Hollywood's jack-of-all-trades, cashing in his teenage success on Nickelodeon to become a respected TV host, feature film actor, comedian, musician and producer. Among one of his most recent roles: becoming a father of twins to Monroe and Moroccan who are affectionately known as DemBabies.

"I'm the disciplinarian in the family," Cannon told Metro on Monday. The "America's Got Talent" host knows there are certain expectations that come with having famous parents, and when your wife is Mariah Carey, even the little things get magnified.

"I'm not looking forward to watching my children be 'the next big things,'" he says. "I'd rather them be college professors or neuroscientists." [Ed note: Good luck with that.]

In New York for the live finale of "America's Got Talent" and to promote Snapple's re-enFACTments campaign, Cannon continues to enjoy the unscripted side of television. His MTV show, "Wild N' Out" made its return this month and he's set to produce and host the reincarnation of "Soul Train," of which he has fond memories.

"A Nick Cannon Snapple Fact would be that at 15 years old I was a 'Soul Train' dancer," he recalls. "That was the first time I was ever on national television. I used to sneak into Paramount studios and stand outside and wait to be chosen."

What's MS-DOS for WTF?

Whatzit.

Mumblecore pioneer Andrew Bujalski's latest is original and more.

Originality can be overrated. When a film — or a song, or a book, or anything — comes along that's genuinely unusual, there's a tendency to dwell on the uniqueness without burrowing deeper into the work. Let's get this out of the way: "Computer Chess," the fourth film from mumblecore pioneer Andrew Bujalski, is unlike anything you've ever seen. A first viewing can be spent marveling and mouthing "wow" over how legitimately and unspeakably weird it is.

Set at a titular event at a tiny, nowhere hotel in either the late '70s or early '80s, it was shot with a Sony AVC-3260, a video camera designed in the '60s. The black-and-white, combined with the tacky clothing, oversized glasses and toxic geekiness, give it the air of outsider art. It starts out looking like fake-found footage, but only gets richer and stranger. Cats inexplicably roam the hallways, characters turn odd and there's even a left-field, never-explained color sequence.

It's a gas, but a second viewing reveals a certain depth. This isn't a mere stunt, although the camera work and editing — wreaking of de-centered frames and clumsy cuts, a rarely not-hilarious simulation of amateur filmmaking — give it a vague midnight movie feel. The concern here, voiced by many in the unforced (but not-mumblecore-y) dialogue, is the fear of machines taking over man. The characters feel this is imminent. We, viewers from 25 to 30 years in the future, know this to not be true.

Or do we? Even in the bygone world of "Computer Chess," there's a lack of communication. We never get to know much about any character. The most prominent (Patrick Riester), almost never speaks and never smiles. He's less shy than robotic. The patrons of the computer chess competition rarely speak unless they're inebriated via booze or drugs. Even those taking part in a concurrent conference — some kind of hippie/love-in psychology deal — only communicate superficially.

This said, "Computer Chess" isn't a thesis film. It more accurately embodies a certain anxiety — a fear of the future from the fairly distant past that throws our own fears into sharper relief. It conveys this without sledgehammer tactics, in a style that's its own thing. Bujalski has always thought outside the box. "Funny Ha Ha," his 2002 debut, brought back no-budget 16mm studies of young adults when everyone was going digital. With "Computer Chess," he creates his own type of film. It's original — but luckily, much more.

For Aubrey Plaza, discussing her new film, "The To-Do List," offers far too many opportunities for oversharing. The '90s-set film follows Brandy (Plaza), a type-A brainiac determined to start college sexually experienced by way of a detailed — if unromantic — list of activities to check off. And Plaza is having trouble keeping her own list to herself.

Considering the sexual frankness of the film, how awkward have the interviews gotten?

People keep trying to trick me into telling them about my first sexual experiences, and then I almost am like, "Well, when I was — wait a minute! I don't need to tell you that. That's for my own brain to remember." For some reason this movie kind of makes you think that it makes sense to ask about it. But no, nothing's been awkward, except for me because I'm always awkward in interviews.

Do you find it weird or insulting that Hollywood always acts so surprised when a female-focused comedy does well?

AUBREY PLAZA

The actress avoids talking about her own sexual history while touring for "The To-Do List."

LET'S NOT TALK ABOUT SEX

Yeah, I feel that. I don't know why. There's just as many women as there are guys, so you would think that it would not be shocking that there's a female audience and that there's people out there interested in seeing female-centric movies.

Do you think "The To-Do

List" would work in a contemporary setting? I think there could be a story about a girl going through her firsts, because I think that's just a universal thing that happens, but I don't think this story could be told in 2013 for many different reasons. This movie was set in a time when people didn't Google everything and people weren't figuring things out online, which I think is the case nowadays. Who knows what teenagers are doing these days? I don't know. I mean, I'm 29 and I feel totally out of touch.

Things have changed at such a rapid pace that who knows how people are learning anything or where they're getting their information.

It's great to see a movie taking the awkward teenage sexual experience, which is usually told [as a guy's story, and showing the girl's side.] I know. That's one of the reasons that I wanted to do the movie, because I'd never really read anything that truthfully explored that time in a girl's life — just a really frank portrayal of a girl figuring out how to do really simple things. Well, I don't know if they're simple. They're just really basic sexual acts. I don't know, everything I say sounds wrong. [Laughs] Just make me sound better and smarter.

If you want anything in particular reworded, just say the word. I'll leave that up to you. You're the professional.

Good luck finding an apartment in the East Village.

Demand for rentals increases

Residential real estate. East Village one-bedrooms were the most popular apartments last week.

The East Village was the most in-demand neighborhood for tenants looking for a rental apartment in the last week, according to data from apartment listings website Zumper. Rounding out the top five neighborhoods getting the most heat were, in order, the Upper West Side, Gramercy, the Upper East Side and Nolita, the data show. The East Village topped the West Village, which held the top spot the prior week but is nowhere to be seen this time.

Nolita, meanwhile, made its debut on the list. In terms of unit types, one-bedrooms were the most popular, comprising 44 percent of renter inquiries to brokers. The median inquiry was for monthly rent of $2,345, the data show.

Two-bedrooms, the previous week's most wanted, trailed with 23 percent of the leads and a median inquiry of $3,182 a month. Studios and three-bedrooms saw 19 and 12 percent of leads, with median inquiries of $1,775 and $3,425 a month, respectively. Two percent of the leads were for four-bedrooms and above.

FRAMED & MATTED

Create a gallery wall in your home

Decor. Framing expert Chrissy Droessler tells us how to turn our drab wall into a showpiece for our memories and art.

Tired of looking at your plain white walls? Display some art already.

"Wall galleries are a great way for people who aren't necessarily 'artsy' to add an artistic feel to their rooms," says Chrissy Droessler, co-founder of the online custom framing company Framed & Matted. "The best part is that there's no right or wrong way. Just do what you feel." She helps us get started.

"One of the biggest mistakes that people make while creating wall galleries is hanging individual pieces up before they actually have an idea of the layout," says Droessler. She suggests laying the frames out on the floor first to organize your gallery. Doing so gives you a clearer picture of the outcome. "Also, if your goal is an eclectic gallery wall, you want to have frames in various sizes," she says. "If you want a clean, crisp look, then the frames should be hung in line, either as a column, as a grid wall or as a few rows."

Quoted

"The best part [about galleries] is that there's no right or wrong way. Just do what you feel."

Droessler

Start with an anchor piece

"When building a gallery wall with different-size frames, it's helpful have the largest work as the 'anchor' so the other works can be added around this piece," says Droessler. "As you add frames, keep the frame wall balanced. By doing this you can naturally build out the wall over time and it will always look like one unit." Droessler adds, "It's important to hang the anchor off center, otherwise you run the risk of your eye only focusing on the large center frame, when what you want is the whole group of frames to be the focus. So by putting it off center and hanging the other frames around the anchor, the gallery wall looks like a cohesive unit."

Keep the center of your gallery at eye-level

"Hang art at eye-level, with the center of the artwork at 60 inches off the floor," says Droessler. This way the frames are at a comfortable place for people to view. "Hang the work too high, and people have to crane their necks, making it less fun to look at."

White or black frames look great with photos or modern art.

GETTY IMAGES/POLKA DOT RF

Tip

Choose the right frames

Keep it simple, advises Droessler. "The focus should be on the artwork and not the frame. Simple white or black frames look great with photographs or modern art. But really any frame that is simple and enhances the artwork is a good choice." If you want to add a splash of color, she suggests using a colorful mat. "To get the right mat, choose a color that is in the art," she says. "If you do not want to commit to a large bright mat, a good option is to get a double mat, with a white top mat and a colorful bottom mat. With the mat, the same frame principal applies — the mat should enhance the art, not draw the focus away from the art."

M. FOWLER

Hanging up

Color-coded

"Something easy to ensure that your pieces stay connected is keeping the frames all the same color or making the mats the same," says Droessler. "It makes things look like they're supposed to be together."

You'll need a hammer, nails and level to get started. / GETTY IMAGES/POLKA DOT RF

Dos and don'ts

- Do a gallery that isn't too static and can always evolve and change.
- Don't start hanging frames before your vision of the gallery is clear.

- Do consider the color scheme of your framing in correlation with the room layout or style.

- Don't freak out! Gallery walls can be intimidating, because they look so cool, but don't allow yourself to get overwhelmed. Take it one frame at a time.

Madison Ave. retail rents skyrocket

Commercial real estate. A developer is poised to test the market on 74th Street.

A nearly 15,000-square-foot retail space with 100 feet of frontage on Madison Avenue and 74th Street has hit the market with asking rents of up to $1,200 a foot.

The space at 935 Madison Ave. will occupy the ground-floor and lower level of a new condominium project spearheaded by health care entrepreneur and real estate investor Daniel E. Straus.

The condominium is a conversion of six historic brownstones and two townhouses formerly owned by the Whitney Museum and is situated adjacent to the main Whitney building, which is set to be taken over by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in 2015. (The Whitney is relocating to a site in the Meatpacking District.)

Joel Isaacs and Joshua Lewin of Isaacs & Company are marketing the retail space, which will have an historic facade and ceiling heights of 18 feet on the ground floor.

The property will be available for possession in July 2014, Isaacs projected.

Straus is hoping that the arrival of the Met in two years' time will increase foot traffic and drive uber-luxury retailers to consider spaces, such as his, which are north of 72nd Street on Madison Avenue. Traditionally, the blocks north of 72nd Street have appealed to contemporary brands geared toward younger buyers, like Intermix, Coach and J.Crew, while the most exclusive luxury labels like Ralph Lauren and Dolce & Gabbana have clustered slightly south.

"We've seen Madison Avenue rents increase dramatically in the last 12 months," Isaacs said. "We don't see much of a distinction between 70th Street and 74th Street these days."

Isaacs said the developer is asking $1,000 a foot for the ground-floor, mid-block space and up to $1,200 a foot for the corner space. Some industry experts, such as Alan Victor, an executive vice president at Lansco, deemed the asking rents "aggressive."

"The question is whether [the location] bears the same traffic that the 60s provide," Victor said.

Demand for such locations is typically from designers searching for stores with small footprints, of as little as 1,000 square feet, said Eric Le Goff, a retail broker with Cushman & Wakefield who recently completed a retail deal on Madison in the upper 70s for $1,000 a foot.

While the location is desirable for its proximity to high-end hotels, Le Goff said he was unconvinced that the arrival of the Met would boost foot traffic significantly enough to seriously impact rents.

Moving on up

Retailers who might have traditionally gone for prime Madison locations may become more willing to look north as rents continue to grow "exponentially" in the most sought-after locations, said Faith Hope Consolo of Douglas Elliman's retail arm, who said she thought $1,000-a-foot rents were reasonable for 74th Street.

Ride the City

Platform: iOS
Price: $1.99

New York City recently launched Citi Bike, encouraging citizens who wouldn't normally get on — or purchase — a bike to bypass public transportation or, even worse, cars. It's a great idea, and we support it — in theory. In practice, urban bicycling is terrifying. It's best to be equipped and knowledgeable. And of the many urban cycling apps, the most useful appears to be Ride the City.

The app is seeping into the nation's cities, including NYC and Philadelphia and aggregates multiple biking apps into one.

There's not just a map and route function — which is great, considering Google Maps for iPhone inexplicably lacks a bike route aspect — it also features weather and a bike shop

Apple reportedly testing larger iPad and iPhone

Apple is testing a 13-inch iPad as well as an iPhone with a larger screen, The Wall Street Journal reports, citing officials at Apple's Asian suppliers.

The company is looking into producing an iPad with a screen measuring "slightly less than 13 inches," as well as iPhones of unspecified size, but with a screen larger than iPhone 5's 4 inches.

Rumors claiming a larger iPad and iPhone are in the works have been around seemingly forever, but there's no clear indication that Apple will actually produce these devices.

Steve Jobs famously shunned form factors different from those of the original iPad and iPhone, but later on Apple did introduce a larger iPhone — the iPhone 5 — as well as the iPad mini, so nothing is set in stone.

J.Crew's new collection to benefit the High Line

Fashion news.

The preppy brand created a new line to help the community.

As part of its new "Garments for Good" charitable program, J.Crew is getting involved with the community. The preppy-turned-high fashion American brand has created a new exclusive collection to benefit the High Line's annual maintenance and operations.

Launching today, the new line of soft cotton t-shirts and sweatshirts for men, women and kids will feature images that celebrate the abandoned railway on Manhattan's West Side, which was transformed into a swank public park. Images on the garments include photographs by artist Joel Sternfeld, botanical illustrations by George Olson and illustrations by children's author Peter Brown. If you're not in the market for T-shirts, the collection also includes a "Park in the Sky" canvas tote bag, friendship bracelets and a onesie for babies.

Prices for the collection range from $15 to $78, and 100 percent of the proceeds will support Friends of the High Line, helping the nonprofit keep the park somewhere you still want to meet friends for lunch. All items will be available at the High Line Shop as well as select J.Crew stores and www.jcrew.com.

Fitness. This Friday, Hugh Jackman reprises his role as Logan in "The Wolverine." His trainer tells us how Jackman turned into a superhero in under a year.

and that gave us an extra couple of months of training dedicated to "The Wolverine."

Initially, they worked on building strength and size, but in the final stages they had to trim him down. "By the time shooting for 'The

he and Kingsbury would do one hour of weights followed by one hour of cardio; on Saturdays, he'd do a one-hour interval session using a gym sled. On Sundays, he'd rest.

Jackman was put on a progressive overload weight-training plan to build up strength on basic lifts like the bench press, squat and deadlift. The point is to increase the weights by about 5 percent every four weeks, adjusting the reps at the same time.

"We'd always train in the morning, so Hugh would drink a double espresso just before for a boost in energy, and have breakfast straight after he was done with the exercises. We worked both the upper and lower body, doing different movements each day. We focused more on increasing the size of his legs, to make sure he maintained balance," he says.

They combined weights with a mixture of interval training and steady-state cardio, such as fast-paced walking. "It would either be low or high intensity — nothing in-between — as the middle-ground stuff is the worst for maintaining muscle."

The diet

Jackman's workouts were so intense that he had to eat around 5,000 calories. His diet included lots of protein (eggs, fish, chicken), vegetables (spinach, broccoli), carbs (oatmeal, brown rice, sweet potatoes) and fats (avocado, nuts, peanut butter, olives) but excluded all sugar, including fruit and alcohol.

"He ate protein every day, but to maximize results, we'd cycle his carbohydrates. On weight training days, his first three meals would be carb-heavy and the last three would include lots of healthy fats. On non-weight training days, he would just have healthy fats," says Kingsbury.

Hugh, jacked

Hugh Jackman and his personal trainer, David Kingsbury, started getting ready for "The Wolverine" halfway through working on "Les Misérables," for which Jackman's character, Jean Valjean, had to go from scrawny to robust.

"In the first section of 'Les Miz,' Hugh had to be thin. But for the second section, he had to bulk up," Kingsbury tells Metro. "That was quite early on, Wolverine' began, he'd gotten his body fat down to 6 percent," he says.

Women's height linked to cancer risk

Location of study: U.S.

Study subjects: 144,701 postmenopausal women

Results: The taller a woman is, the higher her risk of breast, colon, endometrial, kidney, ovary, rectum and thyroid cancers, according to a study conducted by the Department of Epidemiology and Population Health at Albert Einstein College of Medicine of Yeshiva University in New York, N.Y. Also, height was a factor in an increase in multiple myeloma and melanoma. The researchers found the risk of developing any cancer increased 13 percent for every 3.94 inch increase in height.

Significance: "In this data set, more cancers are associated with height than were associated with body mass index," says the department's senior epidemiologist Geoffrey Kabat, Ph.D. Ultimately, cancer is a result of processes having to do with growth, so it makes sense that hormones or other growth factors that influence height may also influence cancer risk.

Some Vitamin B12 products contain a useless "pseudo" form

Location of study: U.S.

Study subjects: Lab study

Results: Some previously accepted sources of vitamin B12, such as spirulina, which is often sold as a dietary supplement, and some shellfish purported to be rich in the vitamin, contain a form of B12 that the body can't absorb, according to a study published in the American Chemical Society's Journal of Agricultural and Food Chemistry. If the body can't absorb it, then the vitamin is useless.

Significance: Low levels of vitamin B12 are linked to health problems such as pernicious anemia, which can be fatal, and elevated blood levels of homocysteine, which may increase the chances of developing heart disease, stroke and other diseases. In order to prevent vitamin B12 deficiency among susceptible groups — such as vegetarians, vegans and the elderly — the researchers recommended eating certain fermented foods, and foods artificially fortified with B12, such as cereals.

Smokers who seem healthy may have early cell damage

Location of study: U.S.

Study subjects: 21 healthy nonsmokers and 31 smokers with no lung disease symptoms

Results: Just because a doctor gives a smoker a clean bill of health, that doesn't mean damage is not being done to their lungs, say researchers at Weill Cornell Medical College. Their study, published in the journal Stem Cell, found that even smokers who seem healthy have damaged airway cells, with characteristics similar to cells found in aggressive lung cancer. The study compared cells that line the airway of so-called healthy nonsmokers with those from smokers with no detectable lung disease.

Significance: Early into a smoker's decision to start, "cells are already starting to lose control and become disordered," says the study's senior investigator, Dr. Ronald G. Crystal, chairman and professor of genetic medicine at Weill Cornell Medical College. "The smoker thinks they are normal, and their doctor's exam is normal, but we know at the biologic level that all cigarette smokers' lungs are abnormal to some degree."

Slow down!

This week's tip comes from Darya Pino Rose, a neuroscientist and the author of "FOODIST: Using Real Food and Real Science to Lose Weight Without Dieting"

Count your chews:

Rushed, distracted eating often results in poor food choices and overeating. Focusing more on the food in your mouth and chewing thoroughly can help you slow down and make better decisions. It can be difficult to remember to eat slower, so counting your chews is a simple, convenient way to eat more mindfully. Twenty-five chews per bite is an excellent goal.

Aim for 25 chews.

Bullied out of the office

Re: 'How to handle an office bully' (Metro, July 22) Your article brought back bad memories of how unfairly and illegally I was treated in ALL of my past office jobs. It was horrible! Being a single female and a new employee at an entry-level position was all it took. I was targeted at every job from both men and women. It got to the point where I would inform/complain to Human Resources to handle the situation, but because I was new and at a low-paying position, it was overlooked and the mistreatment would continue. Speaking up to the person didn't work for me. I was young and wasn't taken seriously.

LAUREN PETRILLO, VIA EMAIL

Let trial unite us

Re: 'Long live morality in the US!' (Metro, July 23) The positions of both liberals and conservatives were rigidly locked in place. I don't think Mr. Zimmerman set out that day to kill a young man. But I also think that he was caught up in the attitudes and fears underlying the "stand your ground" law. The trial and its fallout showed that we're all racist in a way, whether we watch FOX or MSNBC. Justice should bring everyone together on the issues and move beyond sound bites.

MLB power rankings | by Ryan Hannable

No. 1

Red Sox (60-41)

The Red Sox hold on to the top spot after taking two of three from the Yankees over the weekend, including a dramatic walk-off win on Sunday Night Baseball. Their pitching has been outstanding of late, as Red Sox starters have allowed two runs or less in 12 of their last 17 games. They began a pivotal home series with Tampa Bay on Monday night with a loss though.

No. 2

Cardinals (59-37)

St. Louis has won seven of its last 10 and has built a 1 1/2-game lead over the Pirates for first place in the NL Central.

No. 3

Rays (59-41)

The Rays are the hottest team in baseball. They have won 17 of their last 19 games and are closing in on the Red Sox.

No. 4

Pirates (58-39)

Despite losing two of three in Cincinnati this past weekend, the Pirates still find themselves in second place in the NL Central.

No. 5

Athletics (58-41)

Solid pitching has been the biggest surprise for Oakland this season, as the A's lead the AL in team ERA at 3.62.

No. 7

Reds (56-43)

The Reds took two of three over the Pirates at home, but their issues have been on the road, where they are 23-26 this season.

No. 8

Braves (55-43)

Even though the Braves are leading the NL East, they certainly are not playing as well as they would like.

No. 10

Tigers (54-44)

The Tigers have kept their slim lead in the AL Central, one of the least competitive divisions in baseball, despite being just 10 games over .500.

No. 11

Indians (52-47)

Playing consistent ball for the first time since the beginning of the year, the Indians are in a tight race for the AL Central.

No. 12

D'backs (51-48)

Losing two of three to the Giants over the weekend didn't help their cause, as they scored six runs in three games.

Alfonso Soriano / GETTY IMAGES

The Yankees badly need offense, and they are turning to a familiar face in that quest.

The team is reportedly pursuing a trade with the Cubs for former Yankee Alfonso Soriano. Soriano is batting .256 with 17 home runs this season.

The Yankees would likely give up low-level prospects, but Soriano is due $18 million next season and New York could pay some. METRO

MLB. Rodriguez still waiting, reportedly looking to cut deal

In the wake of Ryan Braun's suspension, the attention almost immediately shifted, at least in New York, to the other big name tied up in the same Biogenesis scandal: Alex Rodriguez.

So far, MLB has been silent on when — it's almost certainly shifted beyond if — Rodriguez will be suspended. But ESPN reports Rodriguez is trying to make a deal with MLB in regards to a suspension.

Rodriguez is currently in Tampa, rehabbing from a Grade 1 quad strain suffered this weekend while trying to come back from hip surgery in January, but his teammates were faced with questions Monday night after Braun was suspended.

"I can't say anything because I don't know what happened with Alex," Mariano Rivera told reporters after the team's 3-0 loss in Texas Monday night. "I have to support him. He's my teammate. He's my brother. I'm not saying he did or didn't do it, but if it happens I can't throw him in the street."

Pedroia inks seven-year extension

the Red Sox yesterday.

The deal could set the market for his fellow AL second baseman Robinson Cano. Cano is a free agent at the end of this season and had been looking for a deal of $200 million. His numbers are better than Pedroia's, but the Boston second baseman's deal means Cano likely won't touch that figure. METRO

DEPRESSION MEDICATION AND LOW SEX DRIVE OFTEN GO HAND IN HAND

Consider our clinical research study.

Many commonly prescribed antidepressant medications can have sexual side effects resulting in lack of interest in sex, lack of arousal, or inability to reach orgasm. We are conducting a clinical research study to better understand the effects on sexual functioning of an investigational medication when compared with an approved medication.

You may be eligible to participate if you:

- Are 18-55 years old
- Are currently taking Celexa® (citalopram), Paxil® (paroxetine) or Zoloft® (sertraline) and your depression is well controlled
- Are experiencing sexual side effects thought to be caused by your antidepressant medication

At the first study visit we will also review your medical history and other criteria to see if you are eligible for participation. All study-related office visits, medical examinations, psychological assessments and study medications will be provided at no cost to qualified participants. You may also receive compensation for your time and travel. Call today for more information:

ADHD STUDY

Is your child experiencing symptoms of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD)? Having difficulties with concentration, organizing/completing tasks, or procrastination? Our facility is currently conducting a research study of an investigational medication for ADHD.

To be eligible for screening, child must:

- Be 13-17 years of age
- Provide informed consent from a parent and/or legally recognized guardian.

Eligible participants will receive all study medication, lab work, and study-related medical attention at no cost. You may also be compensated for your time and travel.

Please note that all eligible participants must be accompanied by a parent and/or legally recognized guardian at each visit.

For more information, please contact Dona at 212-877-0424 and/or at dk@brainresourcecenter.com.

Obsessive Compulsive Disorder

Are you bothered by recurrent and disturbing thoughts (obsessions) or irresistible urges to check or repeat things (compulsions)?

Examples of obsessions are concerns with contamination, intrusive images or fear of terrible things happening.

Examples of compulsions are checking for safety, excessive washing, or time-consuming rituals.

The Icahn School of Medicine at Mount Sinai's Department of Psychiatry is recruiting participants for a new investigational medication research study. The study is for Obsessive Compulsive Disorder (OCD) and eligible participants will receive study related procedures and study medication at no charge.

To qualify for the study, you must:

- Be between the ages of 18 and 65
- Currently be taking medication for OCD
- Continue to have symptoms of OCD while on medication
